WORKPLACE LITERACY AND NUMERACY

99% of employers (up from 96 per cent in 2016) reported that they are affected in some way, by low levels of literacy and numeracy in their workforce; with the most significant effect on the business being poor completion of workplace documents and reports, followed by teamwork and communication problems. This is a disturbing statistic at a time when the workforce increasingly requires foundation skills that include not only literacy and numeracy, but also digital literacy and advanced soft skills.
